SLUMS OF NEW YORK.

What a Party of Pittsburgers Saw in the Great Metropolis.

A NIGHT'S LODGING FOR A PENNY.

Chinese Opium Dens and Their American Frequenters.

PICKPOCKETS WITH NO SENSE OF HONOR

ISPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH. NEW YORK, April 5 .- A party composed of seven Pittsburgers, including myself, went out sight-seeing among the slums of lower New York a night or so ago. I had before experienced the exciting diversion, with the guidance of a detective, but I am free to confess that more new scenes were presented this time than ever before. And we started out without a guide, too.

We went down the Bowery, which, by the way, is the most brilliantly lighted and lively thoroughfare in the city. When Mott street was reached we turned off and entered into a street which was noticeably void of electric light, or indeed any kind of lamp to guide the pedestrian. On up the street we went, now and then stopping to peer into the den of some Chinese opium fiend. There is a strange sickning odor which constantly pervades the neighborhood, due to the fatal drug and the cooking of Chinese edibles. After visiting several dens, where we had difficulty in gaining admittance, we concluded to return and get a guide. There is a certain class of men in guide. There is a certain class of men in this neighborhood who gain a livelihood by this very means, and he is a character you don't see in day time. Generally these fellows are ward "heelers," who have a pull some way or the other.

A BOWERY GUIDE.

The man we selected surely had a large list of acquaintances on his list, for at every corner he was greeted with a familiar "H Billy." He was a big burly fellow with deep set eyes, which danced with venomous glee as he would rap for admittance and the door promptly open. It was a source of pleasure to him to show his authority. Mott, Mul-berry, Cherry, and other such byways were explored very fully. The penny lodging house was one of the new features I ob-served. In a low, rickety building, a cellar was utilized as the lodgeroom. Around the wall were stout benches filled with sleeping "guests," who lazily opened their eyes when we entered. In the center of the room was a large stove, around which clustered on the floor women and men indiscriminately, wearily awaiting the break of day, when they would start out once more to beg, steal, peddle, or whatever their vocation demanded

Across the street we went and entered a long, dark areaway. "Keep to the left," said the guide, and as we lelt our way along we soon emerged into an open court, which "Billy" said was like the Whitechapel district in London. The moon was shining brightly, and as it shone down on this locality made the surrounding more and more interesting. You could see silent forms flitting about from door to door, while now and then the revelry of some drunken men would emanate from the nu-merous dens. Within the inclosure was a veritable miniature town of the most motley sort. There were lodging houses, coffee "joints," opium dens. Cheap John stores. Chinese drug stores and heaven knows what, all right within a stone's throw of each other, and off from the main street entirely. We got out of the place after witnessing sights which were and are a disgrace to humanity. To one never having seen such life, it is simply not imaginable that such things exist. But they do.

AN OPIUM JOINT.

Walking slowly down another narrow street, we rapped on a door which was not immediately opened. While we were awaiting to be answered a dozen forms of Chinamen were seen to appear on the street, and lazily walk away. Then two girls, not surely over 17, came out of the adjoining house. Then the door opened and we were admitted. The old Chinaman, who was the only soul at home, said "all out," signifying that no one was hitting the pipe. "Billy" told me that those girls who just came out were Harlem people who had come down town to smoke the poisonous extract of poppy. The mere smoking of opium has ceased to be a novelty to New Yorkers, and a visit to a "joint" is considered a played out fad, but when it comes to be mixed up with your own nationality in the way which we saw it, fully demonstrates that one-half the world doesn't know how the other half live.

A detective told me many interesting things recently during a conversation about thieves and their manner of plying their nefarious vocation. Pickpockets are the hardest set to deal with unless they are caught in the act. It is often said there's honor even among thieves, but the instinct-ive desire to touch a friend asserts itself when an unusually good chance presents itself. For instance, there is a gang of the light-fingered contingent which frequents the race track at Clitton and the "Gut," who make a specialty of touching their own acquaintances whom they know have made

FRANK HERDIC VICTIMIZED. The other day Frank Herdic, the pool seller, walked quietly through the crowd in the betting ring with a $300 stop watch. "Hello Frank," greeted him from everyone almost, but when he got out of the squeeze his chronometer was not with him. It had been dettly screwed from the chain.

Ed. Kinney and several other well-known sporting men have been late victims. The man who is suspicious of the "finger boys" is the one who stands to lose nothing in their hands, but the careless, confident man of the world is the one who comes to grief by his over-assurance in his ability to spot the boys who live without working.

Two Pittsburg young men, who, espec-ially jond of the actors, met a very great surprise this week at the hands of a gentle-manly mixer in a Broadway cafe. These two boys are very wealthy and travel about for the sport of the thing, and they generally seek the company of actors in which to spend a pleasant hour, and the festive dol-lar. So often were they seen with the "actor men" that the people of course thought they were professionals also.

THE BARREEPER'S MISTARE. The other evening about 9 o'clock these two centlemen walked into the case men-tioned above in which to slake their thirst after giving the Broad-way people a sight for an hour or more. The bartender being so used to seeing them in his place with actors, was surprised and said: "Why, what's this mean? How comes it that you people are off so early to-night?"

Why?" asked one of the two. "Weren't you on to-night?" said the im-maculate made man. "On what?"

"Why, on the stage?" Then the two laughed heartily and ex-plained everything, while the barkeen quietly murmured, "That puts the drinks on me. Several Pittsburg acquaintances of mine have been in the city for a week past, and while here have been trying to see everything visible in the city. Among other things, they have been luxuriating in the magnificent Turkish baths. There is one of these delightful institutions and for any town which stitutions not far up town which is a veri-table arcadia in its equipment. It was built by a millionaire brewer, who did not spare any money on its proper fitting out.

While one of the gentlemen from the Smoky City was plunging about in the pool after having been rubbed thoroughly, he exclaimed: "Oh, if we only had one of these things home I would live in it." His remark caused some little discussion among the remainder of the crowd, and the general verdict was that if some person in Pittsburg would expend enough money to build a commodious and luxurious bath,

I saw J. M. Oakley, your leading stock broker, on Broadway last night. He was attired in evening dress, and looked as if he was going theater-wards. "Jack," as he is familiarly known among the boys on the Exchange, is a great favorite here, as he is everywhere. He is a shrewd speculator with indegement as been as a dagger, which with judgment as keen as a dagger, which is verified by the position he now holds in the financial world. His house is perhaps the leading brokerage establishment in Pittsburg, while his New York and Chicago branches are other places of importance. He is storning at the Brangwick is stopping at the Brunswick.

The city has been reasonably well filled with good Pittsburg citizens during the past week. Among the familiar faces seen on Broadway and in the prominent hotels are: George Sliney, who has been here for two weeks. He returned home Friday. Dickson, the tailor, is over here purchasing. P. C. Dean, o Taylor & Dean, is a St. James G. Dean, of Paylor & Dean, is a St. James guest. Theodore Hostetter is also there. At the Hoffman are T. W. Erwin and F. W. Van Osten. The Fifth Avenue people are M. and Mrs. Elmer T. White, John Page Laughlin, Robert Wardrop, Mrs. William Thaw and Miss Thaw, D. P. Reighard, Mrs. Byron Painter, Joshua Rhodes and Miss Rhodes, M. A. Verner, James H. Aiken and wife, Mrs. M. Laughlin and Miss Lela Laughlin. Collector S. D. Warm-castle and son and H. Fisher and wife were recent guests at the Albemarie.

STOOD BY THE CITY OF PARIS.

Roberts states that he laid by the Paris six hours, and that on the beat from the Paris coming alongside his vessel he informed the officer in charge that he would do all in his power to assist the disabled ship.

He signalled the steamer Aldersgate and with her proceeded to come up to the Paris, and on reaching her informed Captain Watkins that he had spoken the Aldersgate, who was willing to tow the Paris to Queenstown. He also offered to take off her passeucers and leave them at Queenstown, not New York, as has been incorrectly reported, and even stated to Captain Watkins that if it was absolutely necessary to save life he would tow the Paris to Queenstown. Captain Watkins, on learning from Captain Roberts that the steamer Aldersgate would tow him, signalled "Thanks, go ahead," so he proceeded on his voyage."

Written by Lending Southern Democrati and Intended to Convert the North-Their Ideas on the Race Ques-

Florida; Vest, of Missouri, and Messrs. W.
M. Fishback, of Arkansas; Ira P. Jones, of Tennessee; C. S. Long, of West Virginia, and B. J. Sage, of Louisiana, have collectively written, and will soon publish, a book entitled "Whythe Solid South; or, Reconstruction and Its Results."

It undertakes to narrate fairly and dispassionately in concise and popular form the his tory of the reconstructed Governments in each State, showing how the Republicans obtained control and how they lost it, the figures and facts as to shrinkage of values and increase of debt and taxation under those Governments, and the prosperity of the South under present auspices. The book speaks of Abraham Lincoln's death as an appalling calamity to the South, argues that Andrew Johnson followed strictly Lincoln's plan of restoration, and contends that if Lincoln had lived he would have been able to defend that plan against the assaults of Congress Each chapter is signed by its author, who thus becomes directly responsible for the truth of his statements, and the claim of the book in its preface (written by General Herbert, its author) is that in all the chapters the facts are understated rather than overstated. The race question and the race troubles are extensively discussed, the statement made that there is no intention to agitate for the repeal of the Fifteenth Amendment or the deportation of the negro. Educational and material statistics of many kinds are given in support of the contention that the negro is prospering and that the South is solving for itself the negro question.

The book is dedicated to the business men of The book is dedicated to the business men of the North, with a statement that they are in-terested in continuing the prosperity of the South.
